Sensorimotor Early Childhood Themes

Listen, look, feel, taste, smell! Sensory input surrounds us. Just as intellectual abilities vary from child to child, sensory processing abilities also vary widely. Some children with a sensory integration disorder are unable to tune out all the information their bodies perceive, while others are unable to perceive some of the information that they need to do their schoolwork. The noise of the heater distracts Cathy and she misses the homework assignment. The posters fluttering on the wall keep Joe from concentrating on his math problems. Brittany's legs and arms feel like they have to move—she can't focus on her reading. Imagine all the sensory input that must be processed to dynamically engage in daily activities. Sensory processing is the reason that most people can perceive and use this information while maintaining a "just right" state of alertness. A few children will respond to minor changes in the environment or schedule while others may need more extensive "Sensory Strategies" which may include quiet times away from the class, increased movement opportunities, oral motor activities and/or "heavy work" opportunities incorporated into their daily routines.

In this one-day seminar, health care professionals, educators and parents will learn characteristics about each sensory system, signs/symptoms of Sensory Processing Disorder, and practical strategies for application in children's daily routines, along with current research to support sensory processing practices. In addition, participants will learn how to apply sensorimotor activities, as described in Learn to Move, Move to Learn, to both school and home settings. This unique approach is geared toward serving young children in an inclusive environment with a transdisciplinary approach. The sensorimotor groups are planned to provide experiences to stimulate and integrate the underlying sensory systems in the human body, which incorporate activities and experiences using motor, cognitive, communication and social skills to enhance learning. Adaptations will be discussed for children with Autism Spectrum Disorder, Down Syndrome, Cerebral Palsy and developmental delay. Hands-on activities will enrich the learning process for participants. Participants of this intensive seminar will learn skills and strategies they can immediately use in their classroom and home settings.

Course Director

JENNY CLARK BRACK, OTR/L, BCP, is a licensed pediatric occupational therapist with over 19 years of experience working as a school-based occupational therapist, independent contractor for early intervention services, private practitioner, speaker, consultant, author, and inventor. Mrs. Brack currently owns a pediatric therapy private practice, Jenny's Kids, Inc. She received her bachelor's degree in Occupational Therapy and graduated with distinction from the University of Kansas in 1990 and has received her AOTA Board Certification in Pediatrics. She has written journal articles that have been published in professional journals such as OT Practice, Occupational Therapy Forum, and Journal of Occupational Therapy Students. Additionally, Jenny has written a book on sensory processing entitled Learn to Move, Move to Learn: Sensorimotor Early Childhood Activity Themes (AAPC 2004), and more recently has written a sequel Learn to Move, Moving Up! Sensorimotor Elementary School Activity Themes (AAPC 2009). In addition, she has published two DVDs; Learn to Move: Dinosaurs (AAPC 2005), a companion to her first book; and Sensory Processing Disorder Kit: Simulations and Solutions for Parents, Teachers, and Therapist (AAPC 2006), which won the 2007 media in excellence video award from Autism Society of America. Mrs. Brack is a contributing author for the book Autism Spectrum Disorders: A Handbook for Parents and Professionals (Greenwood Publishing Group 2007). Jenny is the inventor of the Patent-Pending "Weigh" Cool Bracelet (www.abilitations.com). Jenny Brack has spoken both nationally and internationally on a variety of topics, including sensory integration/processing.
